Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 27 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Turning more unsettled.

Today:
Cool and rather cloudy for many with outbreaks of rain or showers across central and northern parts, some heavy. Brighter in the far south and southeast of England with some sunny spells, feeling warm here.

Tonight:
Rain and showers moving southwards across the UK, though southeast England probably staying dry. Turning clearer across Scotland with a frost in shelter.

Wednesday:
Outbreaks of showery rain, heavy at times, affecting central and western parts of England and Wales. Brighter elsewhere, though further showers for Scotland. Feeling chilly for most.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Sunny spells and scattered showers, heavy in places. Rather chilly, especially out of the sun, with occasional overnight frost.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.